AMERICANA HIGHWAYS – Cary Morin’s Dockside Saints is Intriguing and Compelling , “...guitar virtuoso Cary Morin delivers generously on a hot steaming stylish & his warm raw-boned vocal reminiscent at times of Mark Germino (“Rank &File” LP) is well-applied... if I gave stars, this is an easy 5. One of the best in a good year for Americana music.” -John Apice, August 7th, 2020

BANDWAGON MAGAZINE – Album Review: Cary Morin – Dockside Saints, “...Fact is, on Dockside Saints, it’s all really good stuff. Throughout, Morin has an amazing ability to mix in a little of just about everything, while staying unique and true to himself... Via one of the great American art forms, Cary Morin shows us how diversity is both the spice of life and a whole lot of fun.” -Chick Cavallero, August 5th, 2020

CD HOTLIST (New Releases for Libraries), "Cary Morin is an artist with a complex ethnic and musical heritage: an American Indian of Crow heritage who grew up in Great Falls, Montana, he is a virtuosic fingerstyle guitarist whose music is deeply informed by the cultures of the Mississippi Valley, particularly of Southern Louisiana. His latest album evokes (sometimes simultaneously) the sounds of New Orleans, Memphis, and Mississippi... The string that binds everything together is Morin's fine songwriting combined with his astounding guitar technique. Highly recommended. -Rick Anderson, August 3rd, 2020

COLORADO SOUND – Interview: Cary Morin, "...Fort Collins-based musician Cary Morin needs little in the way of introduction. A virtuoso in almost any style on guitar, Morin has won countless awards, including at Telluride and within the indigenous music community and blues music communities. Having played in front of native audiences to European ones, from The John F. Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. to the stages at FoCoMX in Fort Collins, Morin has been everywhere..." COWBOYS & INDIANS – From the new album, Dockside Saints, Cary Morin's finger-style Native Americana tribute to his Crow heritage needs to be put on repeat. Song premiere "Valley of the Chiefs,"-Dana Joseph, July 20th, 2020

DISCIPLES OF SOUND – Cary Morin Channels Little Feat, "The 12-track album kicks down the door with "Nobody Gotta Know." This is a nod to Little Feat's "Hate To Lose Your Lovin" and just about any Zachary Richard and/or Buckwheat Zydeco track. It's got a swagger and passing wink that delivers a naughtiness that's pretty infectious. Brian Brignac's drumming would catch even the late Richie Hayward's attention because of how tight and full it is from start to finish. And the lead guitar work (I assume from John Fohl) is fat and firm with just enough flash to let you know that there's a lot more gas in that tank. If the balance of the record is this stable and steady then Dockside Saints is going to become part of the history it seems to so aptly celebrate." – June 17th, 2020

GLIDE MAGZINE - FINGER-STYLE GUITAR WIZARD CARY MORIN BRINGS KILLER SONGS TO THE BAYOU VIA 'DOCKSIDE SAINTS' (ALBUM REVIEW), "...great songs delivered by a band of the highest caliber South Louisiana musicians, just brimming with hooks, infectious rhythm and deep soul. Morin's considerable guitar skills are still on display but not necessarily in the forefront. His songs take on a completely new wardrobe here, dressed in Cajun, Creole, and Zydeco, produced by one of the best in the business, Tony Daigle, at the renowned Dockside Studios, hence the album name...He brings a singular soul that fully engages all. Let's recognize Morin as an outstanding songwriter..." – Jim Hynes, August 5th, 2020

MAKING A SCENE – "...Cary Morin releases the best album of his career at a time when promoting new music will take a higher power. There is something special at play here, perhaps something ancestral was captured, some ancient Native culture of the South. The Crow Akbaatatdia, and the Cajun and Creole voodoo traiteurs, (spiritual healers), cannot help but be pleased with the fusing of Cary Morin's award winning and dynamic finger-style guitar, his Native Americana songwriting and melodies, and pure Louisiana soul..." -Viola Krouse, August 7th, 2020 <https://www.makingascene.org/cary-morin-dockside-saints/>

MICHAEL DOHERTY'S MUSIC LOG – "...The album opens with "Nobody Gotta Know," and right away I'm digging the Cajun sounds and that delicious rhythm..." -Michael Doherty, June 24th, 2020 <https://michaelsmusiclog.blogspot.com/2020/06/cary-morin-dockside-saints-2020-cd.html>

NO DEPRESSION – Cary Morin's Textured Vocals Anchor Zydeco Romp on 'Dockside Saints' – "...the thing about Morin is his voice, textured and steady, is the glue holding the songs together. You're not drawn to the vocals because they dominate the tracks — it's the opposite. The vocals work because they mesh with every style within every song, an auditory illusion where two people hear different things when listening to the same sound. Zydeco fans might hear a Louisiana growl in his singing. Blues fans will hear more of a smoke. And rock fans might think Morin comes from their world. Morin's voice fits into so many styles that the songs make perfect sense, even when he and his band are juggling musical genres..." -Steven Ovadia, August 5th, 2020

PASADENA WEEKLY – Trax “...Southern gospel, and history-haunted narratives (“Chosen Road,” “Valley of the Chiefs,” inspired by his Crow family heritage). Morin’s evocative acoustic and slide playing and earthy vocal delivery position him on fertile terrain, somewhere between Malcolm Holcombe’s shamanistic intensity and Van Morrison’s gruff soul...” (4 out of 4 stars) - Bliss Bowen, August 6th, 2020 <https://pasadenaweekly.com/trax-08-06-20/>

ROCK AND BLUES MUSE – Dockside Saints, Cary Morin “...At times, Dockside Saints is thrilling, galloping with all the edge and danger of an outlaw. Elsewhere, it is languid and deep, irresistible. Morin’s guitar lifts and rolls, humming low and sparkling bright, weaving a spell from plucked strings, which at first appears simple, yet captures the ear with overlaid rhythms, sympathetic melodies and intriguing counterpoints. To say that the band is at their most compelling on the more adventurous tracks is merely a personal preference. Every cut here is more than worthy of your time. Taken as a whole, it is another strong addition to Morin’s already impressive legacy.” -Chris Wheatley, July 27th, 2020

ROCK IS THE NEW ROLL – Cary Morin Dockside Saints “...Exploring the musical landscape on the dirty side of roots-based Americana this eclectic guitar-slinger will have you riveted from the opening bell with “Nobody Gotta Know” a voodoo blend of Cajun, Swamp Rock, with hints of Bluegrass that seemingly shares some DNA with Dr. John...” –Rock Is the New Roll, August, 10th, 2020

TAHOE ONSTAGE - Cary Morin brings unique spirit to ‘Dockside Saints’ - “...Cary Morin’s obvious talent and wisdom, and his perfectly subtle incorporation of two different heritages, has resulted in an extraordinary blues album. It’s another fine mark of a real American blues star, ascending rapidly.” -Tom Clarke, July 21st, 2020

TAKE EFFECT – Cary Morin Dockside Saints - As one of the most revered modern acoustic pickers, Cary Morin returns with more of his genre defying song craft that recruits Cajun, Creole, Zydeco and plenty of other styles into the Native Americana prowess of Dockside Saints... An album that’s not lacking in grooves, rhythm and unpredictable songwriting, expect traces of blues, gospel, country, funk and jazz to grace these arrangements, and expect them to be delivered in a fashion you've never heard before and won't forget anytime soon." -Take Effect, August 9th, 2020 <https://takeeffectreviews.com/august-2020/2020/8/9/cary-morin>

THE ALTERNATE ROOT – Cary Morin Dockside Saints - Virtuoso Blues guitarist Cary Morin returns for his sixth album, Dockside Saints. Recorded at the fabled New Orleans Dockside Studios, this album drips with spicy, Cajun flavors. Still present are Morin's expressive Piedmont Blues guitar picking and his Greg Allman meets John Hiatt vocals. But the musical spices of New Orleans infuse every note with an Emeril Lagasse "Bam!" burst of flavor... At times earnest and insightful, and at times bouncy and buoyant, Dockside Saints is a spicy tribute to the birthplace of the Blues." -Brian Rock reviewed, August 7th, 2020

THE TOLEDO BLADE (Toledo, OH daily) – "Cary Morin hits the sweet spot with Dockside Saints" - "Man, I like Cary Morin. Think of a vocalist with the soul of Van Morrison, but an aficionado of fingerstyle guitar with catchy lyrics and a folksy, down-to-earth multicultural sound that isn't politically correct but is just intriguing... This much is clear from Dockside Saints: He's a great fit down in music-rich Louisiana if that tells you anything about his talent." -Tom Henry, August 6th, 2020

THE ROCK DOCTOR – As a finger-style acoustic guitarist he's untouchable. As a songwriter, Cary Morin is deep and soulful. Dockside Saints is an inspired mix of Zydeco, Cajun and Creole with heaps of Piedmont blues & country, with dashes of gospel and folk- irresistible... These songs are compelling explorations of love, faith, hardship and heritage, and I would not want to live without them." –The Rock Doctor, July 28th, 2020
